

BA GRAPHIC DESIGN YEAR 0*

Graphic Design Year 0 introduces students to a variety of graphic design practices and processes. The course aims to provide a solid practical preparation for entry to our BA(Hons) in Graphic Design.

*Course subject to validation

The aim is to provide a comprehensive grounding that will ensure students are properly prepared for entry into one of our four BA(Hons) courses in Graphic Design, Illustration, Photography and Design for Publishing.

The course is mainly studio-based and delivered using a range of teaching methods including lectures, seminars, tutorials, group critiques and self-directed study. Initially you will be given specific projects that are designed to build your ability and confidence and develop personal areas of interest.

Between them the teaching staff possess a wealth of knowledge and expertise and their enthusiasm for specialisms will ensure your experience will be thorough and inspiring.

The University College has excellent workshop facilities, all of which are managed by specialist technicians. When not engaged on studio projects, you will be introduced to the history of graphic design. This background study will help you bring context to your ideas and work. You will be encouraged to think out of the box and to challenge pre-conceived ideas and assumptions.

After successfully completing Year 0, you will be guaranteed a place on one of the BA(Hons) courses in Graphic Design, Illustration, Photography, or Design for Publishing at Norwich University College of the Arts.

Who should apply
Graphic Design Year 0 is suitable for a variety of students.

- You may have studied A levels that are not entirely relevant to your chosen degree. Therefore, an intensive year of study will help you build a suitable portfolio for a Year 1 undergraduate course, or
- You may not have the necessary grades to start an undergraduate course, or
- You may be a mature student with relevant work experience but no formal qualifications.
